I am extremely concerned about the current issues on shore line fishing, sancutaries and endangered species. I am a local woman born on Kauai and have lived here my entire life. I have seen many changes to our beautiful island some good and some not so good. As islanders our lifestyle has been always connected to the ocean. I have been taught to respect the ocean, take only what I can eat and make sure that my children and grandchildren from generation to generation can enjoy it. Saving and making our island waters a sancutary is not the answer. Education is, there are an abundance of turtles more than I have ever seen even as a child. This is a good thing. The monk seal seems to have increased although I am 50 years old and cannot remember ever seeing monk seals till the 1990's. Actually I even think that the monk seals are dangerous to another endangered species which are my Hawaiian grandchildren (not to much of us around; we are not on a protected list either.) (I'm being sarcastic; I appologize I am sure you want to here facts.) The only facts that I have to share is not everyone on Kauai makes a lot of money; are children have that on free activity to keep some of them out of trouble. If they cannot surf, dive spear fish, shore line fish or even go out on a boat there is nothing free for them to do. Our island depends on tourism, we need jobs. But there is one thing this event has done it has made us aware of concerns and money may best be spent to educate. The native Hawaiians had seasons for hunting and fishing maybe it might be time for everyone to go back to basics. But please hear the majority of the islands plea and not make our island a sanctuary Mahalo for your time
